Creating Home from Who You Are

BIOGRAPHY

Denny Daikeler is an innovative Interior Designer, Interfaith Minister, and Speaker who has redefined Interior Design by incorporating environmental psychology and spirituality into her work with clients, her writing, and her presentations to educational organizations, spiritual centers, corporations and churches. Realizing that the home is a powerful tool that supports life goals, challenges, and lifestyles, Denny advocates that the Interior Design field must address ways of partnering with the client on a personal and investigative level. Then homes will be designed from a responsible place that supports and inspires the life within.

In a career that has spanned over 30 years, Denny discovered early on that there was a great gap between the trends of her industry and what a person deeply connects with in their home. She quickly changed the way she approached her profession by deciding to first explore the needs of the individual and the family then connect this dynamic to life in the home through design. She has created an entire process of self-discovery that revolves around the client's Inner Blueprint and Beloved Object. Once a designer or client discovers what colors, shapes, and organization style resonates for them, they can translate that into a design for the home that consciously addresses the depth of their whole life. Homes then become environments of beauty, healing and empowerment.

Denny shares her process of transformation in her book What Color is Your Slipcover: How Discovering your Design Personality Can Help You Create the Home of Your Dreams, which was published by Rodale, October 6, 2004.

She creates seminars across the country for individuals and designers, and acts as a facilitator for the American Society of Interior Design. She has presented at colleges and universities as well as holistic centers, churches, schools, corporations, and spiritual conferences internationally.

Viewed as an expert in her field, Denny is frequently interviewed for national publications such as The Wall Street Journal, The Philadelphia Inquirer, Cosmopolitan, Country Living, Good Ideas for Decorating and Philadelphia Style. She is equally comfortable on TV whether as the Home Makeover person for 4-1/2 years on AM Philadelphia, a local news and human-interest television show aired daily, or as a spokesperson on Banyon's Discovery Channel and the House and Garden Channel.

Having received her bachelor's degree at Drexel University, she continues extensive study in psychology and human behavior. In 2001, she was ordained an Interfaith Minister through the School of Sacred Ministries. Denny now speaks, writes and conducts seminars on these issues of design along with her counseling business. She makes her home in North Wales, PA.
