Creating Home from Who You Are

TESTIMONIALS

Kerry Forbes, President PA East Chapter ASID

"As a thirty-three year professional designer and the current President of the Pennsylvania East Chapter of the American Society of Interior Designers, I am pleased to read a book that explains how to create the often allusive but definitely desired feeling of well being and comfort in our homes. What Color Is Your Slipcover? presents easy methods that explain why certain fabrics, colors, and furniture resonate with our instincts and why we simply feel better when we are surrounded by them. I align with Denny's easy to understand explanations of why we instinctively relate to one object versus another, and agree with her challenge to not be afraid to accept the sometimes uncomfortable realization of these discoveries. By embracing this kind of advice we are more apt to create a personal environment that is healthier, vibrant and desirable.

Susan Duval, Seminar Coordinator, Health & Wellness Center by Doylestown Hospital

"In the last few years, I have hosted hundreds of local and national speakers and authors at the Health & Wellness Center. When anyone asks me who my favorite is, I always say "Denny Daikeler!" Denny consistently receives glowing evaluations from our attendees. She is a very professional and dynamic presenter, with incredibly deep and wonderful material to share. I recommend her wholeheartedly. She touches Souls."

Linda Daly, ASID, Interior Outlook

"I highly recommend that design professionals attend one of Denny's lectures or workshops as I found the experience not only educational but entertaining! I enjoyed her informal format and the open exchange of ideas with her and other attendees. The explanation of the design process outlined in What Color Is Your Slipcover? was fascinating. Denny's lecture encouraged me to continue finding ways to do more, and how essentially important that really is. That's where this book comes into play so well. It can be a workbook used to help a design professional achieve a better understanding of their client; or it can be a book for anyone interested in getting in touch with their interior spaces and living environments."

Marianne Heidelbaugh, Marianne Heidelbaugh Interiors

"Denny! -- I couldn't put it down ("THE BOOK"!!!) I'm exhilarated and feel that my approach to design has been elevated to a much higher level. I cannot wait to integrate What Color is Your Slipcover? into my design practice. You simply must get your message out to all designers. I feel so strongly about it. I want them all to experience my awakening, enthusiasm, and energy. Thank you for your tremendous gift."

Pat Heim

"As I contemplate the many ways the workshop has affected me, I sift through memories of the process, particularly the tears that accompanied my growing realization that dedication to creating a beautiful, organized and nurturing home was a worthy life goal. One after another, your exercises invited and challenged me to discover and articulate my likes and dislikes, my wants and needs, my longings and intentions, as well as my values and priorities. What emerged was a sharper, clearer image of the real me as well as the design for a living space based on that reality. I feel an abiding sense of peace and satisfaction. Through the workshop, I found the permission to love my home unabashedly. This freedom opened my heart. Amazingly, I now love everyone, including myself, more deeply.
